The co-operative food

It's an exciting time for The Co-operative Food. We've a long history of doing the right thing - we've campaigned for responsible retailing for over 150 years - and we've always been passionate about meeting the shopping needs of the community. That's why we're focused on the continuing development of new businesses as well as the proposed acquisition of more than 800 Somerfield group stores. Such ambition needs substantial investment, not only in the properties themselves, but in our expanding team of location analysts - and the tools they use for their work. Join us, and you'll benefit from all this, and be an important part of a growing organisation.

This is a highly competitive field of work: our competitors often share our interest in a particular site, so pressure can be intense. But with the help of our modern software tools and GIS technology, and excellent training and development, you'll be better equipped than most to identify and recommend potential retail investments. Examining turnover, catchment, population and demographics, you'll assess business opportunities and help us acquire existing businesses in association with Acquisition and Development. Your expertise and ideas will give you plenty of scope to shape the future of the department, and you'll enjoy the camaraderie of a tight-knit and influential team within an organisation that values its people and recognises their contribution.

You might be in a similar role at the moment, but this is not essential. Multi-site experience would be ideal. But if you have food retail convenience experience, our solid induction programme will give you the analytical skills you need in this challenging role. Most importantly, though, you will need a logical mind, excellent relationship building skills to a high level, credibility and confidence and excellent self-motivation. Comfortable with a large amount of accountability, an excellent team player, you will have the huge commitment necessary to make a success of this important and very visible opportunity.

In return, you will receive excellent benefits including pension scheme, membership, discounts on products and services.
