Here, there, everywhere, right across the country. Sainsbury's is embarking upon an unrivalled programme of new store investments and extensions that will see our total floor space increase by a staggering 15% inside two years. It's a programme that's backed by an investment in the latest GIS, modelling and database technologies. But ultimately, it will be people who'll make it all happen.

The scale of our plans means we are looking to bring on board people with complementary expertise. You could be using your knowledge of GIS, demographics or customer insight to forecast sales and influence capital investment decisions. Or you could be using your data analysis expertise, including strong Excel skills, to provide teams with business-critical information on everything from competitor performance to the delivery of new space.

If you're educated to degree level or equivalent in a Geography, Maths, Economics, Business or other relevant discipline, you'll have every opportunity to grow your skills in a role that is anything but desk-bound. Your contribution in helping us meet our new space growth targets will also be rewarded with an attractive package.
